

Since 2003 Teresa has worked as a self-employed consultant specialising in policy analysis and report writing in the fields of health, social care, information technology, China, and global business and finance.

Previously she had a distinguished career as a journalist, including the post of Business News Editor at The Independent. She spent many years in South East Asia and China, running The Independent's Beijing bureau from 1992-1999.

Teresa has B.A. in Physics and Philosophy from Oxford University, an M.Sc. in Information Technology from University College and is currently completing a Bachelor of Engineering degree.